Definitions of Faith Formation and Youth Ministry Leaders

Faith Formation Leader

For our purposes here, a faith formation leader is a person experienced in educational/formational ministry in the local church, having had some education, either formal or experiential, and whose gifts are recognized by a congregation through a formalized agreement. Thus, an ordained person, with a master's degree called to a local church as a minister of education is a faith formation leader, just as a lay person who recently accepted a part-time offer from her or his congregation to oversee the church school is a faith formation leader. Though possessing vastly different education and experience and serving in vastly different roles, both have in common the fact that a local church recognizes its need for a staff person responsible for faith formation ministries and selects or calls the appropriate person to serve in that role.

Youth Ministry Leader

A youth ministry leader is much the same as a faith formation leader except that their focus of ministry is in working with and ministering specifically to teenagers. Again, education and experience will vary. The exact definition of "youth" should be determined by each individual congregation.

In order to determine whether your congregation requires a volunteer or paid faith formation and/or youth ministry leader, consider the descriptions that follow:

Volunteer

A volunteer faith formation or youth ministry leader should be considered a part of the church staff, even though he or she is not paid. The support, training, and communication with the pastor, other members of the church's staff and this volunteer are required for an effective working relationship resulting in an effective ministry. The absence of a salary should in no way diminish the value and quality of the expectations of the volunteer who takes on this important ministry. All expenses and supplies need to be reimbursed. If the congregation determines that it requires tasks of the faith formation or youth ministry leader that need more education and background such as training, specific skills, knowledge of educational and developmental theories, and biblical and theological training, it should consider making this a paid position.

Employed Layperson

Laypersons who serve as faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders may not view their work as a calling, yet they may find enough enjoyment and fulfillment in these positions to willingly dedicate their time and energy to the children, youth, and adults they serve in a paid staff position.

Employed Authorized Minister

In the United Church of Christ, many ministers of faith formation and/or youth ministry are ordained. An ordained minister is a minister of word and sacrament having taken a few, one, or no Christian education or youth ministry courses in seminary, as some seminaries do not require these courses for graduation.

Contractor or Consultant

A consultant is generally contracted for a specific project or role and a set period of time, such as the examples listed below under “How a Consultant May Be Utilized.” As a contractor, they are self-employed and as such are responsible for providing their own resources, primary office, and benefits. The hourly or unit rate is thus higher than for a typical employee. This fee is negotiated between the consultant and the hiring body.

How a Consultant May Be Utilized

- Develop with and for the congregation a program for faith formation. This could include an overview of the church year, an outline for weekly programming, and long range plans for the program.
- Serve as a mentor to a Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministry Team, providing program evaluation, resources, leadership training, and any other negotiated services.
- Serve as leader for a specific program, such as Confirmation, or to fulfill other faith formation and/or youth ministry needs determined by the hiring body.
- Serve as a mentor for a faith formation and/or youth ministry staff person, providing resources, support, and guidance for a specific period of time.

A Note About These Categories

Although the descriptions above seem to fit nicely into labeled boxes, the educational background of faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders can be as different and varied as each individual. Some discover their call to be a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader early on, and are able to follow a college (and sometimes graduate school) curriculum that gives them a good academic background in Bible, theology, and developmental and educational theory. Others arrive at a position in faith formation ministries much later, but are able to use their life experiences in the church, as well as their secular employment experience, to carry out their responsibilities effectively.

It should also be mentioned that the course of study that most ordained ministers undertake in seminary does not include training in faith formation and/or youth ministry. Be sure to talk with prospective ordained candidates to find out what their training and experience has been with children and teens, rather than assume that their process to ordination included such training. It will be up to the search committee to examine the education and training background of the candidates they interview for the congregation’s faith formation and/or youth ministry position.

Embrace diversity.

A Covenant for Church Youth Ministries

This Covenant for Church Youth Ministries is inspired by and adapted from “The National Charter,” a similar set of promises promoted in the United Kingdom by two organizations — the Association of Christian Youth and Children’s Workers, and Youthwork — a collaboration of organizations working together to resource and inspire Christian youth work. The Eastern Ohio Association of the United Church of Christ obtained permission from these UK organizations to draw upon and modify the contents of “The National Charter” for use in this covenant. It was then shared with the Association of United Church Educators, and is used with its permission and blessings.

Background

The Covenant for Church Youth Ministries is a set of eight promises that churches adopt when considering the practices and principles they will use in nurturing and supporting people, both paid and volunteer, who work with youth. (Youth are defined as persons age 13 to 18, as defined by United Church of Christ guidelines.)

1. We will pray and support.

We believe that our youth workers need spiritual support in their work with young people.

We promise to pray for our youth workers and keep their needs a high priority in church prayer life.

2. We will acknowledge the importance of gifts and God’s call.

We believe that gifts and call are best discerned in the context of the faith community.

We promise to provide opportunities for prayerful discernment.

3. We will provide opportunities for retreat and reflection.

We believe that taking time to think and pray is just as essential for our youth workers as organizing events and meeting young people.

We promise to provide opportunities for our youth workers to use part of their schedules for retreat, reflection, worship and personal development.

4. We will provide ongoing training and development.

We believe that maintaining the gifts and skills of the youth workers is an ongoing process and that it is important to continually invest in professional development.

We promise to set aside time and money to provide this for our youth workers.

5. We will give a full day of rest each week.

We believe that taking regular time off helps maintain our youth workers’ passion and energy for their work with young people.

We promise to actively encourage our youth workers to take a day away from their role each week.

6. We will share responsibility as a priesthood of all believers.

We believe that having a youth worker does not release the rest of the church from our responsibilities toward young people.

We promise to encourage everyone to play a part in volunteering, praying for and supporting young people.

7. We will celebrate and appreciate.

We believe it is vital to acknowledge what our youth ministry leaders are doing and the commitment they have made to work with young people in our church.

We promise to make sure our youth ministry leaders know they are appreciated and we will celebrate their achievements.

8. We will strive to be a just employer.

We believe it is important to have clear structures and procedures for recruiting and employing youth ministry leaders, and to provide supportive management structures which are fair and just.

We promise to follow non-exploitive practices in the way we employ our youth ministry leaders.

Extending a Call

Establishing a Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministry Committee

Adapted from The Youth Ministry Handbook, Rev. Kim Mislin, First Congregational Church, Bakersfield, CA. Used by permission.

Note: This article is intended for larger congregations with a good number of children and youth. The information provided is still important, but should be adapted by each individual congregation to meet its unique ministry needs.

No one person should be responsible for all aspects of faith formation and/or youth ministries. There must be shared leadership and a network of accountability, even if the church has only fifty members and four children/youth. Without this, the church leaves itself open to the potential for significant liability. The easiest way to establish this network of accountability is by establishing a Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries that is accountable to the governing body of the church, and works closely and cooperatively with the hired faith formation and/or youth ministry leader(s).

The group that the Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries reports to should have a member of the Committee as a voting member. This person serves as the link between both groups.

The establishment of a Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries makes a clear statement about the desire to be involved, and intention in having a high quality program for its children and youth. This positive approach provides a good foundation for the ministry.

A Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries should include representation from the governing body that the Committee reports to, parents, the youth themselves, other pertinent staff, and other interested persons.

If youth activities such as choirs, service clubs, and sporting groups are also considered to be youth ministry activities, then representatives of these groups should also be voting members of the Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries Committee. The goal is to provide a voice for all aspects of the children and/or youth ministries, enriched by the viewpoints of those not directly involved in this ministry, thereby providing balance.

The Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries should exercise leadership in the following ways:

1. Establish a Mission Statement of the vision, objectives, and theology of the youth ministry program.
2. Establish in writing clear guidelines and procedures for all youth ministry activities, regularly reviewed and modified as needed. Guidelines and procedures should include fiscal matters, so that those involved in youth ministry are aware of the financial resources available to the program, such as a fund-raising policy, for instance.
3. Review and approve youth ministry activities before they occur. It will be up to the committee to decide which activities require approval.
4. Act as an advocate for the youth and for the adult leaders with prayer, affirmation, and support. Find opportunities to publicly acknowledge the youth and their adult leaders.

5. Mediate difficulties and disputes that involve the youth and/or the youth ministry program modeling positive conflict management and communication skills so that problems are dealt with directly and in a respectful, timely manner.

After a committee is established, it should be publicly recognized in a worship service in whatever way is consistent with the particular faith tradition. In this way the entire church acknowledges and empowers this very important ministry.

One of the first tasks of this committee should be to discuss and draw up a covenant for working with the staff member(s) responsible for faith formation and/or youth ministries, outlining specific roles, relationships, and expectations of each party.

The Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministry Committee should meet monthly for the purpose of being consistently and faithfully involved in the children's and/or youth ministry program. Once a committee is established and becomes comfortable with a routine, an hour a month should be sufficient for conducting most business. A sample agenda for a routine meeting is as follows:

1. Prayer
2. Sharing of joys and concerns
3. Review of events requiring approval and any other business
4. Long-range planning
5. Other business
6. Affirmation of youth and leaders
7. Prayer

The Committee for Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministries should report monthly to the committee or governing body to which it is accountable. In this way, open communication will be maintained and the children's and/or youth ministry program stands a better chance of being integrated into the overall church ministry.

A planning retreat is often helpful when a committee first forms. A retreat can be a wonderful time for relationship-building and dreaming, as well as designing concrete guidelines and plans.

Calculating the Type of Leadership Support Your Congregation Needs

The numbers and calculations used here are from Ministry Architects (<https://ministryarchitects.com>), as well as from Sustainable Children's Ministry by Annette Safstrom and Mark DeVries and Sustainable Youth Ministry by Mark DeVries. You are encouraged to visit this website for other helpful faith formation and youth ministry resources.

1. Youth Ministry Budget

$1,000 to $1,500 per child/teen expected to participate in the faith formation and/or youth ministry program. This figure includes faith formation &/or youth and music staff salary and benefits, meeting and event supplies, trip costs, etc. (Calculated for 2021.)

2. Paid Faith Formation and/or Youth Ministry Staff

Full-time employee:

One full-time faith formation and/or youth ministry staff person for every 50 teens and 75 active children expected to participate.

Part-time employee:

One half-time faith formation and/or youth ministry staff person for every 25 active teens and 37 active children expected to participate.

3. Volunteers

One adult for every 5 teens/children expected to participate. (Your congregation's safety policy's required number of volunteers concern the safety of the children/youth; this figure is specifically for the number of volunteers needed to sustain a program.)

4. How many children/teens should you expect to participate in your faith formation and/or youth ministry program?

The average number of active children/teens that tend to participate in a typical congregation's faith formation and/or youth ministry program is 10% of the number of worshippers on a typical Sunday morning at that church.

5. How big will we be able to grow our children's/youth ministry program with these guidelines in place?

A typical congregation that puts these guidelines in place, along with a consistent structure and vision, can expect to grow its youth ministry program to 20% of the number of worshippers on a typical Sunday morning at that church. For children, the percentage is 15%. However, after this number has been reached, the potential for increased numbers is not as predictable.

Mark DeVries states that there are some exceptions to these norms:

- ✓ "Churches that have youth groups roughly the size of Jesus' youth group (12 or so) can typically do youth ministry much less expensively."
- ✓ "Youth groups in towns with just one middle school and one high school may find it possible to attract larger numbers than the norms predict."

Expectations and Questions to Consider

Does this congregation need a full-time or part-time faith formation and/or youth ministry leader? Refer to the next page, “Calculating What Type of Leadership Support Your Congregation Needs.” Other determining factors are your congregation’s financial health as well as its commitment to faith formation, children, youth, and families.

A congregation seeking a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader should examine carefully its needs and priorities for faith formation and youth ministries. This will help the prospective faith formation and/or youth ministry leader to better understand your congregation and the role that they will have. It will also help your congregation to clarify its own needs and expectations.

On the following pages are checklists to help you determine what tasks you will include in the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader’s job description, along with an estimation of how many hours each task will take. In preparation for filling out these checklists, first address the following questions:

- ✓ Do we need a person who will lead us in envisioning what faith formation should look like in our particular congregation, in planning and developing programs that will make our vision a reality, and in overseeing the implementation of the program we plan?
OR
Do we need a person who will administrate our existing programs and supervise volunteers?
- ✓ Do we need a person who will have oversight of the total faith formation ministry for all ages?
OR
Do we need a person to oversee a special area such as children’s, family, youth ministry, adult education, and/or intergenerational programing?
- ✓ What qualifications are we looking for in a staff person for faith formation and/or youth ministry?
- ✓ Which board or committee will the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader be responsible for?
- ✓ What support will be provided for the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader (e.g., administrative, work space, resources, committee and volunteer support)?
- ✓ What will be the relationship of the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader to the rest of the church staff (other ministers, employees, volunteers)?
- ✓ For each event or task, will the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader need to attend meetings and/or equip/train personnel? If so, how many meetings will be needed and how long will each one be?
- ✓ Will the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader need to find resources, create publicity, and/or recruit personnel? Most preparation of this type requires at least 1-2 hours for every hour of contact time, depending on the type of event/project.
- ✓ Will the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader need to provide set-up and clean-up?

Visit your United Church of Christ conference website for compensation guidelines for authorized ministers and clergy.

Church Law & Tax offers resources for helping congregations to determine appropriate salary packages for their staff members: <https://www.churchsalary.com>

And the Unitarian Universalist Association offers a comprehensive resource for their congregations to use: <https://www.uua.org/leadership/library/staff-salary>

Another calculation method uses percentages related to secular salaries in your area, as follows:

The compensation for faith formation and/or youth ministry staff should be appropriate to the individual's education and experience. Persons with experience in complementary fields (such as art, music, and drama, for instance) should have this expertise considered in the discussion of the compensation package as well. The following are basic guidelines with which to start creating a compensation package. The number of years of church ministry experience and the number of faith formation and/or youth ministry continuing education courses and workshops taken also should be considered when determining the salary for a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader.

For a full-time faith formation and/or youth ministry position in the church:

- Ordained and authorized ministers should be compensated according to the conference's guidelines for clergy in your conference.
- A person who holds a master's degree in religious or public school education may be compensated relative to the equivalent of a public school teacher in the church's district with the same education and same years of experience.
- A person who holds a bachelor's degree in religious or public school education may be compensated relative to the equivalent of a public school teacher in the church's district with the same education and same years of experience.
- A person who has completed the equivalent of a denominational noncredit program of training in theological education may be compensated at least 80% of the salary of a first year public school teacher in the church's district.
- For those who have organizational skills and some educational background but little training or experience in faith formation and/or youth ministry, we recommend compensation at no less than 60% of what a public school teacher in the church's district receives.

As a person receives more training, the salary package should be adjusted annually with a pay raise that recognizes this achievement.

Salary for part-time positions would be the appropriate percentage of the full-time salary guidelines.

Churches that underfund their Christian formation ministry areas often have volunteers, parents, and staff who feel discouraged, undervalued, and disgruntled. In this way, churches can inadvertently undermine their potential for successful or sustainable ministry.

United Church of Christ Classified Ads

If you are offering a full-time position, the United Church of Christ lists employment opportunities on its website that often include openings for Christian educators and youth ministers. Talk with your Conference Minister for assistance in posting your job listing on the UCC site.

Social Media

Facebook, Idealist, and other popular social media sites can broaden your search; however, be aware that you may receive more replies from those who do not have the skills and experience you are looking for from these sources.

Talk to People

As difficult as it is for most congregations to afford a full-time faith formation staff person, the reality is that part-time positions do not draw a variety of candidates from a wide geographic area. With that said, the best way to find a good applicant is through talking to people with contacts and connections in the field of faith formation and youth ministries. Other possible places to search would be local schools for teachers and local churches of other sister denominations to see if there are qualified and interested candidates within their congregations.

Local Christian Educator's Meetings

Talk with churches of other denominations in your community to see if there is a local gathering of faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders in your area. These people are in good position to link you with faith formation and youth ministry leaders who are searching for a new setting for their ministry. You may even find a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader there who is currently employed but may be intrigued by your position enough to consider a move! Visit <https://www.auce-ucc.org/about-us> and click on your Region to see if there is a regional AUCE event where you can make connections with faith formation and youth ministry leaders in your area.

Members In Discernment

Members in Discernment are often seminary students who are pursuing a degree toward seeking ministerial ordination. Many of these people do not have training in faith formation or youth ministries, yet some may have taken a class/workshop and/or have had some field experience. Ask your association Committee On Ministry if any of their current Members In Discernment demonstrate the gifts/skills for ministry with children, youth, and families. Do note that a student seeking ordination may not consider staying with your congregation after they graduate.

Christian Camps and Outdoor Ministries Programs

Visit the United Church of Christ Outdoor Ministries Association (<https://www.omaucc.org>) to contact a camp director near you who may know of current and former camp staff members that may be interested and qualified to serve in a faith formation and/or youth ministry position at your church.

One of Your Own

One of the most common ways congregations are filling their faith formation and/or youth ministry positions is by helping an individual from their own congregation, who possesses the gifts and skills for faith formation and/or youth ministry administration, to recognize a potential calling to this ministry. The congregation may also choose to reach out to their conference to pair this person with a mentor from a UCC church nearby. While some may tell you that it is not the best practice to hire from within your own congregation due to potential boundary issues, someone who has served your program as a volunteer and demonstrates the gifts and talents needed for a faith formation and/or youth ministry position could actually turn out to be your best candidate. If you do choose to hire a member of your congregation, be sure to set up professional boundaries at the outset, and communicate these understandings to the entire congregation. Visit <https://www.auce-ucc.org/continuing-education> for a list of training opportunities to offer a new faith formation staff member.

The Hard Truth

The days of people seeking out faith formation and/or youth ministry as a career seem to be drawing to a close as UCC-related seminaries and colleges are no longer offering those degree programs. There is no longer a steady stream of trained faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders to choose from. If you are seeking the most highly qualified and gifted leader for your program, then you will need to offer a full-time position with a competitive salary and benefits with plenty of congregational support for the position. This will draw the best pool of candidates from across the country who will be willing to uproot and move to your community to accept your position. Yet with some creative resourcing, and adherence to the guidelines offered in this handbook, even the smallest congregation will be able to nurture and support a gifted person who is called to this ministry to serve your congregation faithfully and effectively.

The Interview and Selection Process

As a search committee, or group tasked with finding the appropriate faith formation and/or youth ministry candidate for your congregation, you want to strive to discern core competencies and affirm certain standards of excellence.

Seasoned candidates who are aware of and currently engaged in a call to the ministry of Christian formation should be able to articulate their knowledge of the field including a familiarity with best practices, with recently published scholarship or literature, and be able to articulate a clear understanding of the relevance of this ministry to the life of the faith community and to the individuals the community serves.

A candidate new to faith formation and/or youth ministry with the appropriate gifts and skills, and who is a person of faith, may be able to meet the criteria below, but may answer many of your questions differently than a seasoned faith formation and/or youth ministry leader.

To determine the candidate's suitability for this work, a process of crafting good (often open-ended) questions and careful reflective listening must be utilized. Be sure to use the qualifications and characteristics that you are seeking in a candidate to formulate effective questions that will allow the candidates to demonstrate their suitability for the position.

Practically speaking, your best candidate will be a person of faith who:

- Demonstrates an ability to articulate his/her own faith with clarity.
- Has knowledge of and is engaged in the best practices of faith formation and a personal foundation basic to the work (basic biblical knowledge, basic understanding of faith development, basic knowledge of United Church of Christ identity, history, etc.)
- Demonstrates an awareness of and a willingness to participate in the best practices of creating a safe and nurturing environment.
- Demonstrates social, emotional, and spiritual well-being with an understanding of healthy boundaries in all relationships within the church and outside of the church.
- A candidate who is a well-rounded individual with hobbies, relationships, and interests outside the church, as well as having experience and connections within a local church setting.
- Is a person of faith, regularly engaging in Christian practices such as prayer and worship.
- Takes advantage of professional development opportunities.

Some other helpful questions to ask could be:

- What would you describe as the greatest strength you bring to this work?
- What would you identify as a challenge for you in ministry?
- What would you describe as your most creative effort in previous employment?
- Describe in general terms a situation or conflict in your work that you were able to resolve successfully.

- What interests you about the role of [title of faith formation and/or youth ministry position] at this church
- What life experiences have been most helpful to you as a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader?
- How have you supported families in your work?
- What is your experience in intergenerational work or activities?
- Describe how you manage to keep healthy boundaries between your personal and professional lives.
- What would you like to ask us?

BENEDICTION

Ongoing Nurture and Support

Support Group

Contact your conference or association to see if there are groups of faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders that meet regularly for support. Another option is to seek out such groups in your community that are composed of faith formation and/or youth ministry leaders from diverse denominations.

Personnel Committee

If there is a separate personnel committee, be sure that new staff members are connected and have regular meetings with that group. The policies of your congregation will act as a guide to the frequency of the meeting. These meetings should always include time for meeting with a staff person without other staff members present. This will help to build an atmosphere of trust and ensure honest communication between individual staff members and the committee. The evaluation process should be clearly defined (see the Periodic Review page that follows) and a personnel file begun. Confidentiality must be respected.

Communication

Affirm and support the faith formation and youth ministries of your congregation by intentionally keeping the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader's role and work visible. Youth ministry and faith formation events can be publicized in your newsletter, bulletin, on your church's website, Facebook page, and other social media. Announcements can be made during worship. Determine how frequently and in what role the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader will participate in worship with the children and youth to help the congregation view them as an integral part of the Body of Christ. Consider other ministries in the life of your congregation that can be opened up to the children and youth and made an intergenerational opportunity for all.

Personal and Professional Growth

Encourage and support the personal and professional growth of your faith formation and/or youth ministry leader. Make available resources (time and money) for them to attend professional seminars and workshops, as well as personal retreat time for spiritual nurture. Include a line item in your budget for your faith formation and/or youth ministry leader's training and continuing education. Provide an allowance for books and other resources. Provide money to join professional associations such as the Association of United Church Educators (www.auce-ucc.org), which will also acquaint them with colleagues in youth ministry and solid professional development opportunities.

Periodic Review

Review is a process for assessing what is of value. The review or evaluation process is not a substitute for conflict resolution. Rather it is a means of identifying growth and growth goals and affirming the youth ministry leader. This review guide has been arranged in three sections so that the board or committee and the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader can work separately, then together, to compare expectations and work out any discrepancies.

Recognizing Stress and Burnout

Definitions

All people who work with human beings on a daily basis at one time or another may experience stress or burnout. Stress is the result of having to deal with too many crises that break the balance we have in our lives. Burnout can produce exhaustion, depersonalization, and a reduced sense of personal accomplishment. Burnout is the result of our inability to deal with stressful situations in our work, in our lives, or in our family life.

Crisis

Life brings with it certain levels of crisis. (For the purpose of this document, the word “crisis” refers to high-stress events, both positive and negative.) The two main classifications of crisis are developmental and accidental. A developmental crisis is one that is produced by our own maturation. Such events include marriage, birth, graduation, retirement, new jobs, and other changes that are part of the life cycle. Accidental crises, on the other hand, include sickness, accidents, surgery, moving, unemployment, and/or natural disasters. Both types of crises produce stress in our lives. If we are not able to deal with the levels of stress produced by various types of crises, burnout can result. Psychologists and psychiatrists agree that stress is cumulative. When too many crises come together simultaneously, the level of stress increases and the ability of the person to cope is diminished.

Faith formation and youth ministry leaders are continuously dealing with different types of crises in their work environment. Just a message from a volunteer stating that they can not be present for a ministry commitment creates a certain level of stress if the ministry team is not functioning well. If parents are complaining, then stress is created. How much stress a person can handle at a particular time depends on how well equipped that person is and what support is available and utilized by them.

Let's look at the previous example. When the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader receives that message and knows that there are other people they can count on, the level of stress is reduced. On the other hand if there is nobody they can contact at the last minute to fill in, it creates a stressful situation.

Questions to Uncover Potential Sources of Stress

- How many hours a week do you work?
- Do you see your work growing and your time shrinking?
- Who is in charge? To whom do you report?
- What kind of relationships do you have with your colleagues?
- What are the things you do not like to do, but are expected of you?
- Do you feel well compensated for the work you do?
- Who cares about your work?
- What are the sources of support for your work?
- How do you balance your work with your family life and your leisure time?
- What support do you receive from your Conference, Association or national offices?
- How do you renew your skills?
- How do you adapt to or resist change?

These and other questions can help determine if the situation you work in creates levels of stress that can lead to burnout. Stress is dynamic and can change from one moment to the next. However, burnout is a sense of failure that is more difficult to deal with because it radically diminishes coping mechanisms.

Signs of Burnout

- Are you frustrated with your ministry situation?
- Do you think you are at the end of your rope?
- Do you feel emotionally drained?
- Have you lost the passion for your ministry?
- Do you care what happens to the participants?
- Are you having problems relating to other people?
- Do you feel everybody blames you for what is wrong and nobody recognizes what is right?
- When you wake up in the morning, do you dread going to work?
- Do you feel that you are beating your head against the wall?
- Has your health been affected negatively?

If you answered yes to two or more of these questions, you are a candidate for burnout. But this does not necessarily mean you are at the end of your rope. There is hope.

Steps for Dealing with Stress and Burnout

- Take a break. Create distance between yourself and the situation. Take time for spiritual renewal through prayer and biblical reflection.
- Explore and identify the situations creating stress. Try to boil down the problem to just the specifics. What is going on? What is the real problem or situation? Break down the problem into its parts.
- What resources do you have available to help you deal with the particular problem? Consider personal strengths, a problem solving process, and communication skills.
- Identify the problem or situation. Define all the possible alternatives, evaluate the alternatives and choose the best options to act on.
- Celebrate the value of personal relationships and the support network you have. Take time to seek support and other points of view. Contact your Association, Conference or national office for networking and support. Your Regional Representative from AUCE is also a good source of support (<https://www.auce-ucc.org/about-auce>; click on your region).
- One of the strengths of human beings is to learn from our mistakes or our challenges. Take time to articulate in writing what you have learned. These learnings can be helpful in a future situation.
- God will not abandon you. Pray. God will provide you with the peace, patience, and endurance to work through those situations that create stress and burnout in ministry.

Resignation or Dismissal

You love what you do. You love being a faith formation and/or youth ministry leader. However there are times when a person needs to move on, and there are times when a church needs to move in a different direction. Separation can take two different forms — one is resignation from the position; the other is termination by the employer. Each one requires a different approach.

Resignation

Resignation is considered a voluntary action. Changes in personal circumstances, the discovery of incompatibilities with the persons you work with, or marked theological differences that make you uncomfortable are possible issues leading to your resignation.

The issue of separation is a stressful one to deal with, even if you are resigning on good terms. You have developed special relationships with people in the congregation, staff, children, youth, and adults. What should you do?

Create opportunities to express your feelings to those who will be missed. Provide some kind of closing, perhaps during a service of worship, or the congregation may want to have a special reception for you. An Exit Interview (see the following pages) is a process that many churches find helpful for allowing each party to share thoughts and learnings, as well as joys at the close of your time together. Events like this help in the separation process with all concerned. Once you leave a position, professional ethics require you to respect the church's new beginning without you.

If resignation is provoked by particular situations in the work environment, and you feel that the best way out is by resigning, you should be honest. Learn from your experience. It may be time to make an assessment of yourself and set new goals. (A self assessment process is included earlier in this handbook.)

Dismissal

The other type of separation is dismissal by your employer. This type of separation creates high levels of stress for all involved.

Questions to assess your situation:

- Were there any early signs that termination might happen? Did your evaluation show possible signs of dismissal?
- Was there an unusual amount of criticism about you and your work? If so, how did you respond?
- Were your relationships with other staff members deteriorating?
- Were there major theological or philosophical differences between you and the congregation and/or the staff?
- Was the church cutting staff because of reduced financial support or other budgetary losses?
- Do you feel the dismissal was unfair, or you have been mistreated?

Dealing With Reality

Responding to some of these questions may help you put reality in perspective. Do not jump immediately to conclusions before you have examined the total context of the situation. Try to get some responses from the pastor, your supervisor, the faith formation or youth ministry committee or the church board. An Exit Interview (see the following pages) with church representatives can be helpful to you and the church.

Face Your Feelings

Whenever dismissal occurs there are a lot of feelings on both sides. You may feel anger, bitterness, guilt, confusion, loss of identity and low self-esteem. Remember this type of news creates imbalance in your life and emotions need to be addressed in a healthy manner. Remember to be intentional in retaining your professional demeanor.

An unexpected dismissal can create financial setbacks, loss of health insurance, separation from loved ones, and can threaten your personal stability in many different ways. Refer to your contract. What does it say about termination? Does it guarantee any type of compensation in such cases or continuation of the health insurance for a reasonable time? Be sure to check if you are eligible for unemployment.

An Ethical and Professional Response

You will need to maintain a professional attitude when interacting with your peers, colleagues, and the people in your congregation after your departure. Realize that, like you, the congregation needs to move forward, and any disruptive conversations or actions that arise out of unresolved anger or stress will not be helpful for either party. If you are ordained, your Committee On Ministry can provide guidance.

After your final day of employment, it is customary, and wise, to discontinue contact with the members of the congregation (this includes social media). This will help them to make a smooth transition to a new faith formation and/or youth ministry staff person. If you are a member of the congregation you served, you will need to have discussions with the pastor and church leadership as to how you will continue to function as member, particularly when a new faith formation and/or youth ministry staff person is hired. As difficult as this could be, it may be possible that both parties will determine that you seek membership in another church. In either case, speaking the truth in love will be the best course of action, followed by a decision or compromise that will best serve the congregation.

Planning Your Future

Your next step is to take responsibility over your life. Life must continue. This is not the end of the world, although it might seem like it to you now. These are some of the steps you can take:

- Pray
- Do something good for yourself.
- Make an assessment of yourself and your personal resources. (A self assessment process is included earlier in this handbook.)
- Set continuing education goals, if needed.
- Find support from people doing the same type of ministry.
- Do not let your bitterness sever relationships with people closest to you.
- Take steps to promote your spiritual growth.
- Prepare new goals for your ministry and your life.
- Update your resume or Ministerial Profile.
- Develop a network leading to your next position. (See “Networking for a Job Search” included earlier in this handbook.)
- Try to learn the most you can from this temporary setback.
- Trust God. Trust in the One that can lead you forward.

Exit Interview

This process may be revised or adapted to your individual circumstances and church context as necessary. Remember that an exit interview is a time for mutual reflection, not evaluation or a time to emphasize negative experiences. Yet it may be helpful to the church to hear the departing individual speak honestly and openly about challenges, both professional and personal in nature, without judgment.

It is recommended that two or three gather to listen and reflect with the faith formation and/or youth ministry leader. It would be important for the Chair or representatives of the faith formation or youth ministry committee or board and either Personnel or Pastoral Relations Board or Committee to be present, as well as an individual of the departing staff member's choosing — invited for support and to listen in.

A Post-Pandemic Addendum

Post-Pandemic Faith Formation

The COVID-19 pandemic of 2020 created a major shift in the way that congregations provide faith formation programming for their children, youth, and adults. Some congregations found virtual ministry to be nearly as effective as face-to-face, yet others struggled to maintain relationships with their congregants. Given that the culture of every congregation is different, imitating the success of one congregation's ministry can in no way guarantee that it will work with every congregation.

This realization drove church leaders to discover and utilize adaptive skills, envisioning and choosing the best methods and resources for the personality and needs of their particular congregations. The guiding question for that time, and continues to be, "At this point in the life of our congregation, what will be the most effective way to pass on the faith to our children, youth, and adults?" The answer to this question for each congregation will be based on giving itself permission to do ministry in a new way, acknowledging that the world, the church, and peoples' lives have changed. What will feed the souls of our people in this moment?

One of the things we learned during the pandemic is that a return to Sunday School programming is not the only response to that question. The pandemic challenged us to evaluate our programs. So how can we be faithful leaders and mentors as we fulfill our congregational and baptismal commitments to making disciples of Jesus for generations to come? What else did we learn from the pandemic?

We learned that family matters, perhaps more than we were previously aware.

As congregations, we can continue to support our families (which come in all shapes, sizes, colors, and configurations) through fostering intentional connections between these families and those who could benefit from having surrogate "families." We can support parents/grandparents/caregivers in their essential role of passing on the faith to their children and youth, in particular by offering resources that don't add "yet one more thing to do" to their already busy and complex lives (such as resourcing bedtime and mealtime routines, time spent traveling in the car together, and even via Zoom with extended family members). The family will always be the primary vehicle for passing on the faith, and we can offer them much-needed support.

We have learned the critical importance of self care.

As Christian congregations, we have access to a wide variety of self care experiences that have been around for centuries. We call them Christian practices. Perhaps a shift in focus from church attendance and committee meetings to intentional, soul-nurturing opportunities for praying together, small group support and learning, singing together, and worshipping together as an intergenerational community of faith can help our people to slow down their daily routines in order to practice better self care. How can your congregation support and resource a nurturing and conscientious slowing down in the life of your faith community?

We have learned about the faith-forming capacities of intergenerational ministries.

Worship that has been "Zoomed" and "Facebook Lived" into homes has opened up a new kind of intergenerational worship experience. People who live alone have benefitted from online congregational experiences to connect with others in their faith community. Intentional, life-giving (Christian) relationships can happen anywhere and at any time whether we can be together in person or not.

A congregation that puts these three focuses into practice, by virtue of being the Body of Christ together, will grow and strengthen the faith of each and every one of its people in effective and life-giving ways — more than through most of its programs that were in place before the pandemic. In the words of Maria Harris, an internationally acclaimed religious educator who taught at Andover Newton Theological School:

"The church does not have an educational program; the church IS an educational program."

Post-Pandemic Youth Ministries

The COVID-19 pandemic of 2020 created a major shift in the way that congregations provide youth ministry and faith formation programming for their teens. Some congregations found virtual ministry to be nearly as effective as face-to-face, yet others struggled to maintain relationships with their teens. Given that the culture of every congregation is different, imitating the success of one congregation's youth ministry can in no way guarantee that it will work in every congregation.

A guiding question for this time can be, "At this point in the life of our congregation, what will be the most effective way to minister to our people?" And how can we be faithful leaders and mentors as we fulfill our congregational and baptismal commitments to making disciples of Jesus for the next generations? The answer to this question for each congregation will be based on giving itself permission to do ministry in a new way, acknowledging that the world, the church, and peoples' lives have changed. What will feed the souls of our people in this moment?

A few learnings from the pandemic may help to guide this discernment:

We have learned that we actually are able to shift from analog to digital ministries.

The COVID-19 pandemic pushed many congregations out of their comfortable "pews" and into the digital ministry world practically overnight. We went from face-to-face worship, fellowship, mission, and faith formation activities to Zoom-ing just about everything, diving into online communication modalities, and leaving many of our hands-on materials behind. We went from analog — utilizing physical space and materials — to digital — communicating, teaching, worshipping, and connecting online. Now we are trying hybrid ministries — engaging in our traditional congregational activities and practices both physically and digitally in order to reach as many as possible, in order to make all abilities, ages, and individual preferences welcome, no longer leaving anyone out.

We have learned that gathering face-to-face is not necessarily needed for connecting.

Connecting with each other is key to fostering healthy relationships. And we found ways to connect and maintain our relationships during the pandemic without needing to be in the same room. The critical importance of relationships actually has research behind it. Search Institute (<https://www.search-institute.org/>) is a research organization whose most recent research projects have been focused on relationships. Their concluding statements based on this research are, "Nothing — nothing — has more impact in the life of a child [teen] than positive relationships," and "It's not programs that change people, it's relationships."

We have learned that family matters, perhaps more than we were previously aware.

As congregations, we can continue to support our families (which come in all shapes, sizes, colors, and configurations) through fostering intentional connections between our programming for teens and the support of their parents. Parents (as well as grandparents and other caregivers) will always be the primary vehicle for passing on the faith, and one way we can offer them much-needed resourcing is by including them on a regular basis in our offerings for the teens as we foster those relationships.

The adolescent years provide a challenge to the church, particularly when we try to use ministry models that were created for a different era and a different teen culture. Yet one thing remains the same — a focus on the interpersonal relationships in Christ that are fostered with the teens — with and among the teens themselves, with their youth ministry leaders, and especially with the other generations in the congregation. From Zoom games to prayer, from service projects to online resources — the goals for youth ministry are the same as always — to walk alongside our teens on their spiritual journeys.
